International discussion taking place today in London will centre on Yemeni situation

Chatham House, in partnership with humanitarian agencies in the UK, will hold a panel discussion on 6 March ahead of the Friends of Yemen meeting to be held in London on the following day.

“Humanitarian needs in Yemen remain dire, and overcoming those needs means also focusing on Yemen’s longer term recovery. Both the immediate humanitarian needs and the longer term recovery will hinge on the pledged funds actually being delivered,” says Ali Tayeb, Country Director in Yemen at Mercy Corps.

“We need to ensure that the Yemeni voice is heard in London and across the globe for the benefit of Yemeni people. To accomplish this, we must work together with the international community and local humanitarian partners to meet the needs and hopes of local communities in Yemen,” says Dr Hany El Banna, Founder and President of The Humanitarian Forum.

The panel discussion will bring together representatives from Yemeni civil society and international non-governmental organisations (NGOs) to discuss the priorities of Yemeni civil society organisations and strengthen the country’s partnership with the international community.

Yemen's humanitarian crisis masked by faltering steps towards democracy

To talk of Yemen's humanitarian crisis is to talk of politics. If any reminder were needed of that, it was delivered with sobering clarity at a gathering of Yemeni civil society representatives, NGOs and government ministers at London's Chatham House on Wednesday.
